Changes are coming to the Central Valley...

The Central Valley is back...

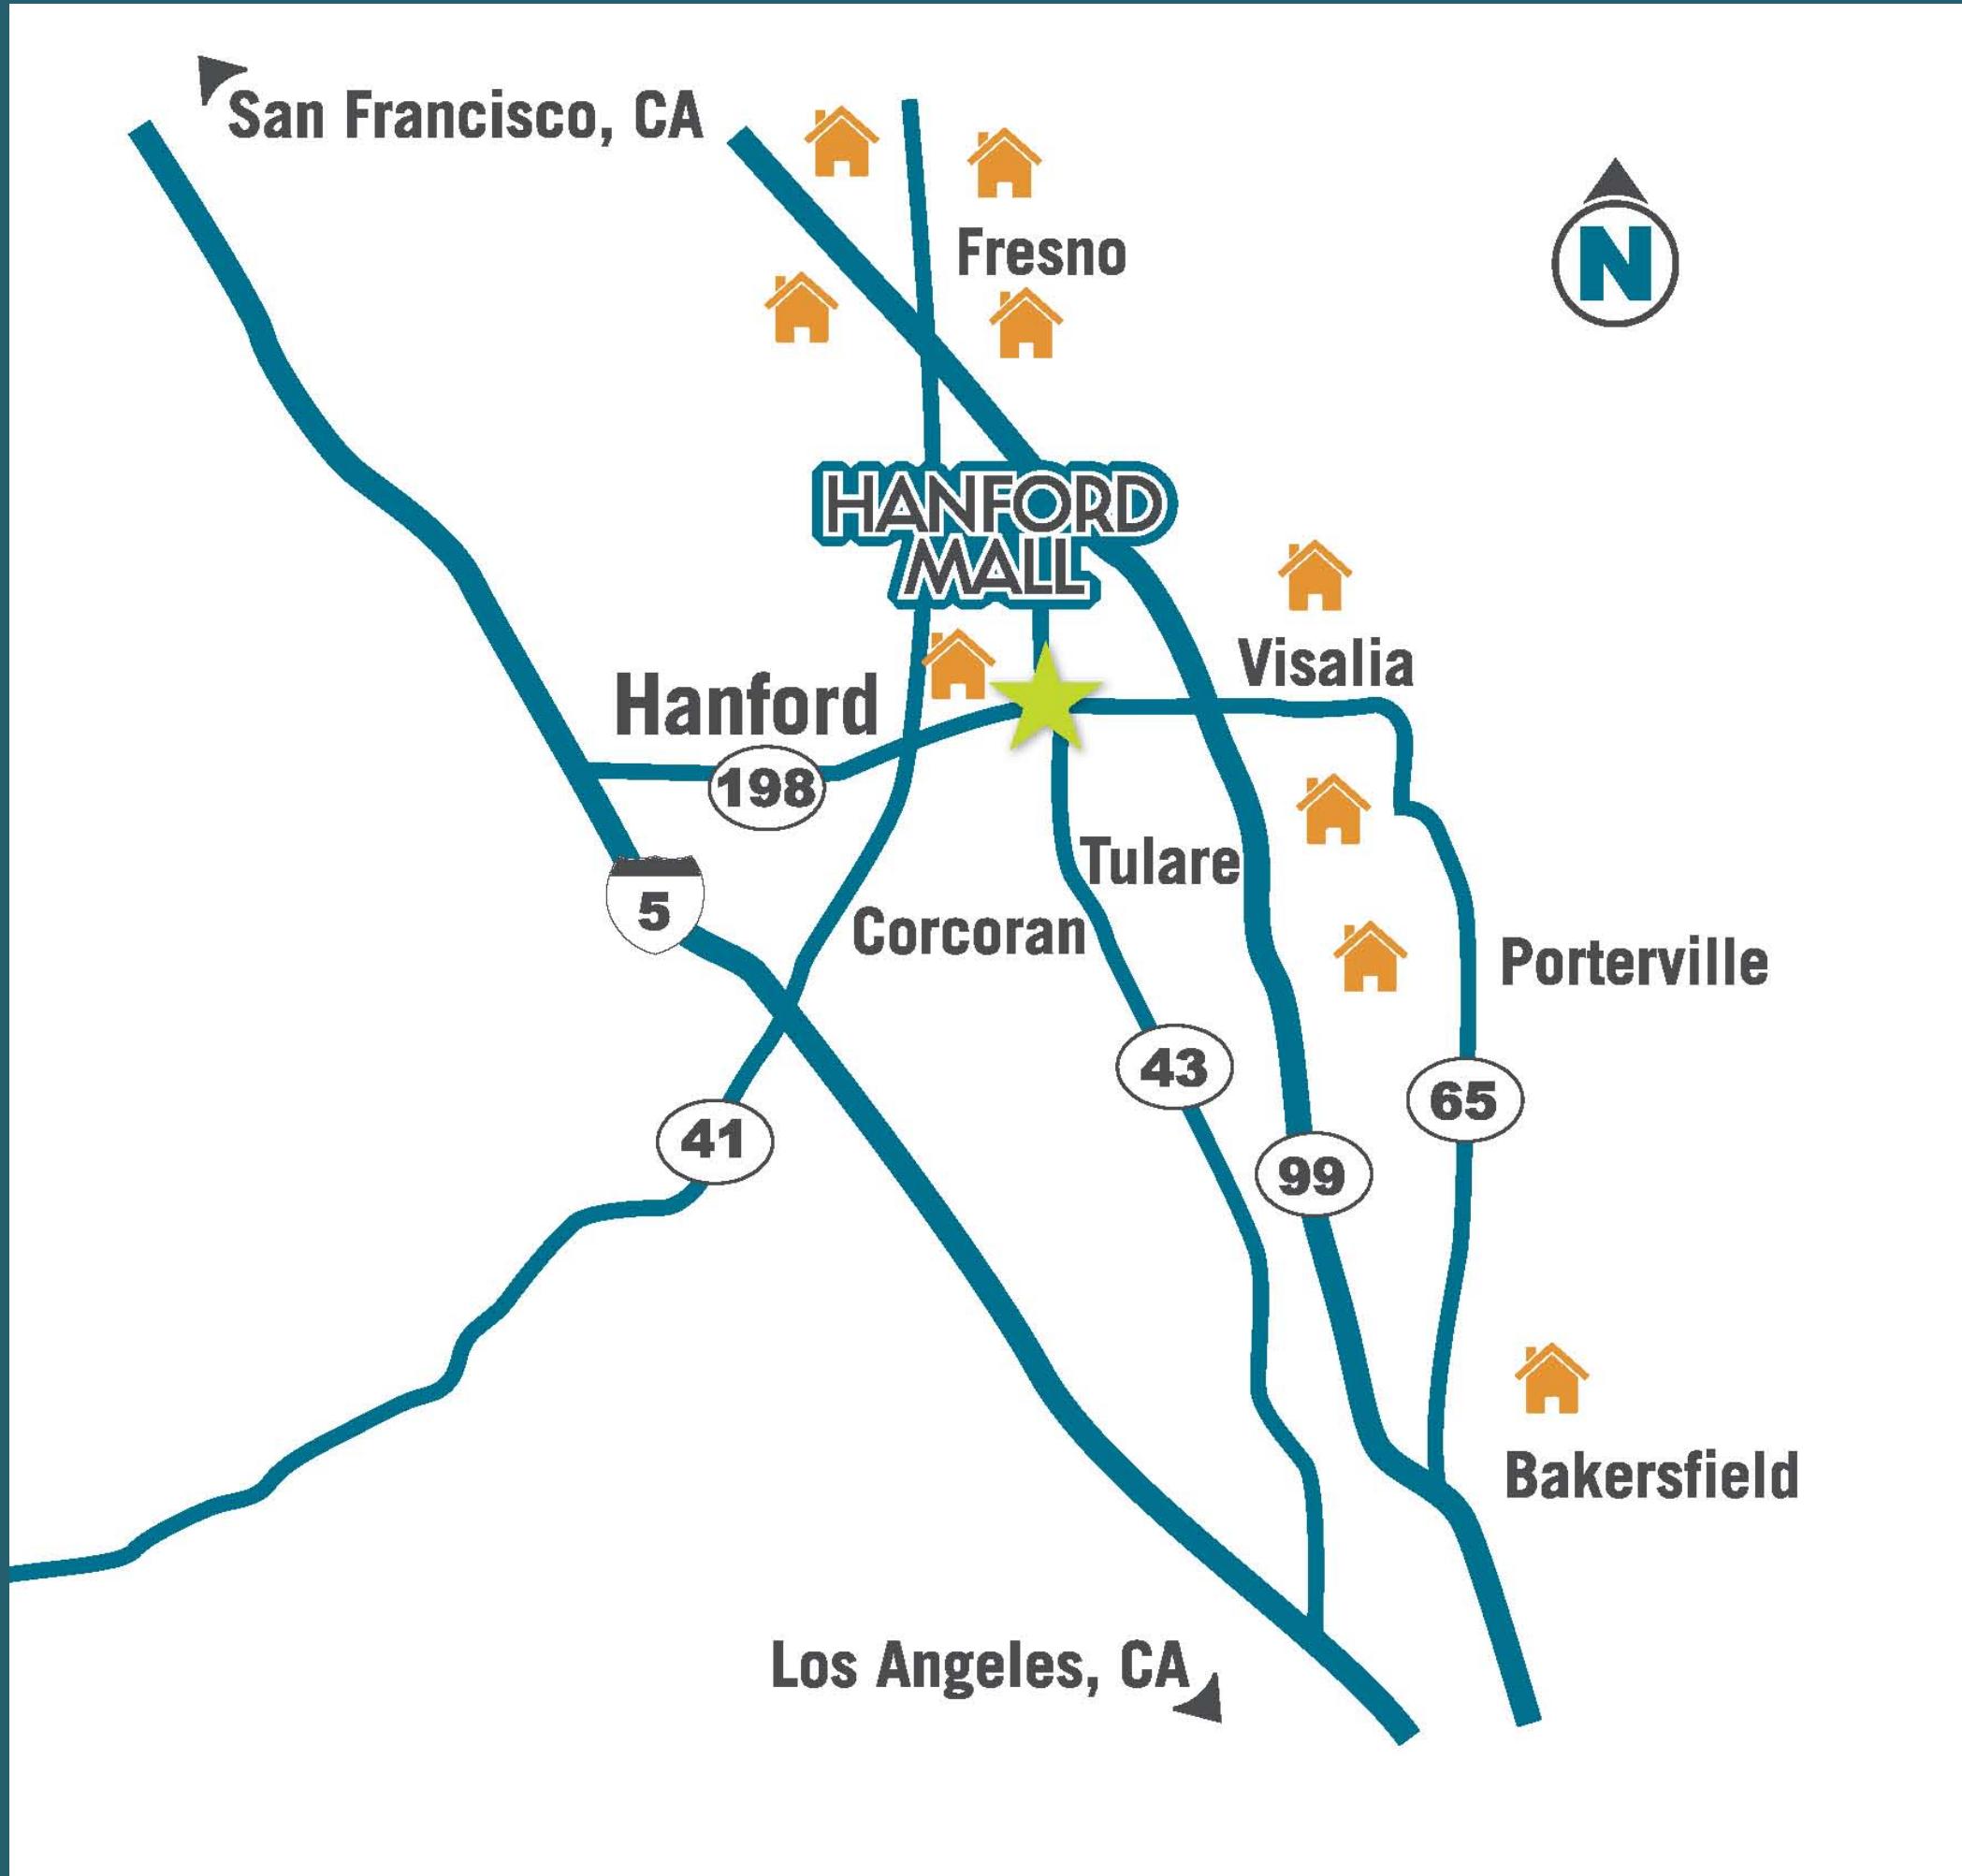

Hanford is growing with Adventist Medical Center, Kings County Government Center, Sheriff's Department, Board of Education, and the Naval Air Station at Lemoore all expanding at a rapid rate.

The Central Valley is booming with a record annual agricultural production of $45 billion, employing vastly more than the entertainment business.

The Central Valley is projecting an 85% increase in population to 7.4 million residents by 2060.

California's "Bullet Train" will connect the Central Valley to San Francisco and Los Angeles. Construction began in Fresno fueling job growth, residential development, and bringing new businesses to the region.

Growing

Residential development is booming in the heart of the Central Valley with thousands of new housing developments in Hanford, and cities from Bakersfield to Fresno.

The Central Valley is the place where young families are migrating to find the suburban lifestyle and affordable homes with plenty of room, yards and good schools.

new homes for more families...

Naval Air Station is expanding...

Naval Air Station Lemoore has begun a 1.6 million square foot facility expansion and military housing on 58 acres, beginning this year.

Thousands of new military personnel, dependents and contractors will contribute an additional $35.5 million annually in payroll to the local economy.

Hanford Mall is 15 miles from Naval Air Station Lemoore and is positioned to benefit from this growth.

Their hands are clasped in front of them, holding a bunch of tall, thin grass or wildflower stems with small, light-colored flowers. The background is blurred green grass.

Big Changes are coming...

The Bullet high speed train HAS ARRIVED...

The $68 billion California High Speed Rail system the “Bullet Train” began construction January 2015 in Fresno, 33 miles North of Hanford.

The Bullet Train is planned to run from Bakersfield to San Jose with a station just minutes from Hanford Mall.

Traveling 200 mph, the Bullet Train will connect the Central Valley, north to Silicon Valley, and south to Los Angeles.

Fueling the Central Valley economy, the Bullet Train has already provided hundred of new jobs with plans for another 20,000 jobs per year until completion in 2020.
